The Seattle Foundation supports people with their philanthropy, helping them invest strategically in causes they care about and in ways that build a Healthy Community.

That’s the business of a community foundation. Our business takes shape through philanthropic consulting, community leadership, grantmaking, our website and more. In all we do, we strive to combine heart, intellect and funding to make King County a better place to live, learn, work and play through strategic support of Arts & Culture, Basic Needs, Economy, Education, Environment, Health & Wellness and Neighborhoods & Communities.
More King County residents are in a struggle against poverty than ever before, battling to meet their basic needs for food and shelter. The Seattle Foundation continues to make Basic Needs a high priority, addressing not only people's emergency needs but also the goal of long-term economic stability.

Our Basic Needs funding strategies center on preventing homelessness, increasing affordable housing and increasing access to nutritious food. In 2010 the Grantmaking Program made $685,000 in grants to support this work. This includes a $200,000 grant to the collaborative Building Resilience Initiative (BRI).

BRI is a three-year funders collaborative formed in late 2008 to address immediate and long-term community needs resulting from the economic recession. Led by The Seattle Foundation and funded by a group of local foundations, corporations and philanthropists, this effort centers on preventing people from falling into financial crisis and providing them with tools to remain financially stable. BRI grants in 2010 supported programs for legal aid, financial literacy and employment counseling.

Our Basic Needs outreach work concentrated on the drive to end hunger. We continued our work with End Childhood Hunger Washington, a statewide program to extend the reach and effectiveness of food stamps, school breakfast, after-school and summer food programs. We are also engaged with many community-based food banks as well as Food Lifeline to improve the emergency food system. These are examples of the types of activities the Foundation engages in to inform our grantmaking and support fundholders with their charitable giving.

In a recent survey, support for Basic Needs came second after Education as the philanthropic priorities of our fundholders. Through donor advised funds, we made grants totaling $4.5 million in this area in 2010. Fundholders have focused more giving in this area both here in King County and abroad, particularly to support relief and rebuilding efforts in Haiti, Japan and other disaster-stricken areas.

Improving Education

Over the past decade, the achievement gap between low-income and non-low-income Washington students has widened. Nearly everyone agrees that remediying it must be our community's top priority. Ensuring that every child receives an excellent education is the driving force behind The Seattle Foundation's investments in Education.

To provide every child with a great education, The Seattle Foundation focuses its work in three areas: increasing support for high-quality public schools, involving families and communities in student achievement, and giving children the skills they need to succeed in school and life.

In 2010 our efforts in strengthening public schools centered on strategies for building a corps of strong teachers and school leaders to work in low-income communities. We championed efforts to bring Teach For America (TFA) to the Puget Sound area. TFA recruits and trains top college graduates who commit to teach for two years in urban schools.

Together with the Bill & Melinda Gates Foundation, we launched the Community Center for Education Results. Citing unacceptable achievement gaps for low-income students and children of color, this nonprofit's goal is to double the number of students in South King County and South Seattle who are on track to graduate from college or earn a career credential by 2020.

Our school-based work concentrated on our Middle School Initiative, designed to support at-risk youth with academic support and enrichment programs that will help them succeed in these critical school years. We expanded this partnership and it now includes the Renton, Highline and Northshore school districts.

Education is one of The Seattle Foundation's largest categories of giving. Fundholders' long-standing commitment to education and the public's demands for better schools and closing the achievement gap ensure that this area will continue to be a strong focus for The Seattle Foundation.

Ensuring the sustainability of our natural environment ranks high amongst the philanthropic priorities of Seattle Foundation fundholders.

Our current priorities are broad strategies centered on improving the health of Puget Sound, engaging everyone in environmental issues, and promoting sustainable growth. As we strive to increase our impact, we will explore refining our funding strategies and seek more collaborative efforts amongst our fundholders, nonprofits and other foundations.

As in every area of community need, we continue to see the volume of grant requests grow. We’re fortunate that our fundholders’ interest in environmental issues is also increasing. A high priority for us in 2011 is to expand our partnering program so that fundholders have more opportunities to consider requests made within their areas of interest.
Nationally, arts and culture organizations saw an increase in donations of just over 4 percent in 2010, according to the annual “Giving USA” study. But areas hit hardest by the recession, like King County, and especially groups heavily dependent on corporate support, still face an uphill battle to raise support.

Public and private funding for the arts suffered in recent years as government and philanthropic support declined or was redirected to basic human services. This was clearly evident in the areas where The Seattle Foundation focuses its Arts & Culture work: supporting a continuum of arts education for students, preserving and utilizing arts space, and broadening community participation and engagement in the arts.

Our work in 2010 centered on helping arts groups identify strategies to become more resilient in the face of these challenges. In partnership with other local arts funders, The Seattle Foundation supported the 18-month technical assistance initiative “Dynamic Adaptability.” It was aimed at helping local arts leaders learn about how others are handling the economic crisis, develop strategies for adapting to new economic times, and obtain guidance in managing change. This research aided fundholders as well, advising them of effective strategies to look for when evaluating grant requests.

In 2010 the Grantmaking Program awarded $327,000 in discretionary grants to a wide range of arts and culture organizations. From the marquee names such as Seattle Symphony Orchestra to the grassroots Maple Valley Creative Arts Council, The Seattle Foundation continues to provide the critical general operating support these organizations need. Additionally, our fundholders contributed $5.4 million to arts and culture groups here and around the country.

The Arts & Culture Element Committee, formed in 2011, is evaluating our current strategies to ensure our grants have the greatest possible impact. This dynamic group of arts leaders and fundholders is providing thoughtful counsel to guide our grantmaking in these new economic times.

ENHANCING HEALTH & WELLNESS

Healthcare is a personal choice yet our communities have a powerful role in influencing the choices individuals have to support their physical and mental well-being. The task of increasing healthcare options and promoting healthy lifestyles, particularly for vulnerable, low-income residents, is the goal of The Seattle Foundation’s Health & Wellness work.

Increasing access to healthcare services is critical. We’ve invested in programs that help immigrants, children, the homeless and others gain equitable access to care. For example, The Seattle Foundation has long invested in the sustainability of the community health clinic network that can serve people where they work and live.

The decline in public funds is creating a challenge for organizations to meet the needs of the growing number of people seeking healthcare services. We know our funding will not completely fill this gap but hope that we can help these nonprofits find new approaches to meet the needs of the developmentally disabled and mentally ill, people struggling with chemical dependency, women and children fleeing domestic violence, and other King County residents.

Our fundholders place high importance on serving the vulnerable residents of our communities. In 2010 $14 million or 27 percent of The Seattle Foundation’s grants (including our own grants and those recommended by fundholders) supported this area. In 2011, we’ll continue our strategies and study the impacts from healthcare reform legislation.

For example, one of our largest Health & Wellness grants last year went to Neighborcare Health, a provider of primary medical and dental care to low-income and uninsured patients. Staff provides services to patients speaking more than 100 languages, delivering care in shelters, transitional spaces, schools and homes.
There are more than 70,000 CHILDREN in Washington state without health insurance.

— KING COUNTY
FOSTERING GLOBAL GIVING

The Seattle Foundation reaches beyond the borders of King County in our efforts to help our fundholders build a Healthy Community around the world. In fact, we are the only community foundation in the nation with an affiliated foundation committed to supporting groups from our city that work internationally.

Our mission in international philanthropy is to provide advice and share information so that fundholders can identify and support effective organizations. A critical partner for us is the Seattle International Foundation (SIF), an affiliate organization founded by Bill and Paula Clapp in 2005. SIF has strong expertise not only in Central America, but also in identifying effective, locally based organizations working around the globe. Our fundholders have access to SIF's knowledge and resources, as well as a broader network of partners we have developed to help guide global giving.

Donor education is a key component of our international work. In 2010 we hosted several events such as “Mobile Technology in the Developing World: Emerging Strategies for Addressing Health and Economic Disparities” and “Reflections on Haiti and What’s Next.” With the launch of The Seattle Foundation’s new website, we introduced a new Global Giving section featuring information on global philanthropy, including local capacity building in developing countries and international disaster relief. Finally, we were a founding partner of the Pacific Northwest Global Donors Conference held in Seattle. Many donors attended this event, which provided education on today’s most significant global issues, including agriculture, climate justice, human rights and technology.

Support for Global Giving goes hand-in-hand with our Healthy Community agenda. Our residents and economy are intertwined with the well-being of the international community. The Seattle Foundation is committed to ensuring that international charitable giving is as fulfilling and effective as philanthropy here at home.
The Seattle Foundation will continue to invest in efforts that unite people and create community in ways that improve the quality of life throughout King County.

We believe it is equally critical to support non-geographic communities. Based on interests, culture and other factors, these bonds help people feel connected and valued, especially in difficult times. For example, a grant to Casa Latina supported the development of a new database to help match day workers with jobs and utilize social networking to generate new job opportunities.

In 2010 The Seattle Foundation established a partnership with Crosscut Public Media, an online media site dedicated to journalism that encourages communities to find creative and sustainable solutions to major issues. Launched with a $185,000 grant from Knight Foundation and a matching grant from The Seattle Foundation, this effort enabled Crosscut to hire a community editor charged with gathering the views of young people, members of ethnic communities, and other often unheard voices.

Together with our fundholders, The Seattle Foundation will continue to invest in efforts that unite people and create community in ways that improve the quality of life throughout King County and make this area such a desirable place to live.
Washington state RANKS 2nd in the mismatch between job openings and the skill level of its workforce.

— INTERNATIONAL MONETARY FUND
Whether it is boom times or a bust economy, job creation is the barometer of community health. Our region and residents cannot thrive without job growth and qualified people ready to join the workforce.

The work of strengthening King County’s economy is wide ranging. The Seattle Foundation directs our energies to concrete areas where we can make direct impact on individual lives. Our key strategies, supported by $682,000 in grants in 2010, are increasing access to resources for underserved businesses, promoting education and training for low-skilled adults, and improving people’s financial stability.

Increasing resources in small businesses goes hand-in-hand with the Foundation’s mission investing program, first started in 2009. We now have $2 million backing small business loans in King County, serving the dual objectives of furthering programmatic goals and earning financial returns.

Job training remains the key component of our work. We continue to incubate SkillUp, the collaborative of public and private supporters of adult workforce training. A champion of “second chance schooling,” SkillUp launched the College for Working Adults in partnership with six local community colleges. By the end of 2010, the College for Working Adults had supported more than 250 students toward their goal of obtaining a one-year college credential in programs such as CNC machining, computer operating system support, medical assisting, early childhood education, and human services/chemical dependency.

In 2010 we also became a key partner in bringing the Emerald Cities Collaborative to Seattle. The goal of this national initiative is to make our commercial buildings more energy efficient and create career opportunities for low-income, low-skilled workers.

Finally, Year Up opened its Puget Sound office in 2011 after more than three years of advocacy and support from The Seattle Foundation. It offers an intensive one-year training and education program that prepares low-income youth for careers and college.

The work of strengthening King County’s economy is wide ranging. The Seattle Foundation directs our energies to concrete areas where we can make direct impact on individual lives.

The Seattle Foundation’s investments to grow the economy are linked to our work supporting a stronger cradle-to-career education continuum. When the Foundation and our fundholders invest in both the economy and education, we fuel all other elements of a Healthy Community.
At The Seattle Foundation, we say we’re in the business of building a Healthy Community. It’s the philanthropic partnership with our generous fundholders and effective nonprofit partners that enables us to do this work. And, it’s through this partnership of commitment and action that we see the strength and value of the community foundation so powerfully emerge. In each and every area of our business, The Seattle Foundation had a highly productive year in 2010.

The Seattle Foundation supports people with their philanthropy, helping them invest strategically in causes they care about and in ways that build a Healthy Community.

Creating a better community by partnering with fundholders to increase the effectiveness of philanthropy is our most important work. It’s how well we serve our fundholders day in and day out—and the effectiveness with which we carry out our fiduciary responsibility—that results in more than $50 million a year to worthy causes here at home and abroad.

In 2010 we conducted a comprehensive survey to gather fundholder opinions and perceptions about their partnership with us. Amongst the key findings were:

- On a scale of 1 to 7, donors rated The Seattle Foundation’s integrity and trustworthiness a very high 6.5. Honesty, reliability and fiscal responsibility are fundamental to us as a community foundation and these values will always guide our actions.

- The Seattle Foundation’s website is highly valued by our fundholders. At nearly 60 percent, our web usage is twice as high as that at the median community foundation.

- While fundholders universally appreciate the convenience of our website, there are many who continue to value the personal, one-on-one consulting that is our hallmark.

Central to our mission is the effective stewardship and investment of our donors’ funds. In 2010 our investment portfolio earned an average annualized return of 12.2 percent. This compares very favorably to our benchmarks of the Morningstar Moderate Allocation Index at 11.7 percent and the standard 60 percent stocks/40 percent bonds allocation that also yielded 11.7 percent. These results of 2010, following the exceptional return of 20.1 percent of 2009, have raised our total assets to pre-recession levels.

We provide extensive knowledge and research, a rich and deep community network, and excellent online services, as well as the opportunity to partner and connect with like-minded donors.

A major milestone for the year was the launch of our reimagined website in September. The new www.seattlefoundation.org, plus our social media presence, opens the doors to the public on years of Foundation research. The site’s robust search tool allows visitors to conduct detailed searches among hundreds of nonprofits and to make donations directly to them. We’ve seen our web traffic triple since the launch.
For fundholders, the site offers enhanced online services and reporting to support your personal philanthropy. We recognize the value funders place on the ease and convenience of managing charitable giving online, from requesting grants to tracking gifts and recordkeeping. In 2011 our focus is on ways we can use the site to share grant opportunities tailored to fundholders’ specific areas of interest.

We make grants to nonprofit organizations and help others make effective grants based on a county-wide philanthropic agenda, called “A Healthy Community.”

During the year, we also developed new strategies to bring the Healthy Community agenda to life. As the underpinning of our grantmaking and community work, this framework was developed to express the seven essential elements of a thriving community and the areas where philanthropy can have the biggest impact.

In 2010 we restructured our grantmaking and now review applications by element area. This allows us to review all related grant requests at the same time and better evaluate how well they support our Healthy Community strategies. Through newly formed Element Committees, we are gathering experts within each area to assist us in evaluating applications and recommending strategies for Foundation engagement.

We awarded close to $5 million in grants through The Seattle Foundation’s Grantmaking Program and supported our donors in making $44.9 million in grants from their charitable giving funds. Our donors’ generosity continues to amaze us all, particularly as we see their continuing investments in education and their compassionate response to aid those affected by natural disasters here and abroad.

We continue to focus intently on the areas of education and economic opportunity in our grantmaking and community leadership work. Undoubtedly, the highlight of 2010 was the Healthy Community Luncheon featuring Geoffrey Canada, president and chief executive officer of Harlem Children’s Zone in New York City, which attracted more than 1,200 people.

The Seattle Foundation

Our goal is to make The Seattle Foundation a place where people who care about building a Healthy Community and where all contributions—ideas, opinions, efforts and funding—come together to make King County a better place for today and tomorrow. The advances we made in 2010 to strengthen the philanthropic partnership with our generous fundholders, nonprofit partners, and the broader community are truly creating a stronger, more resilient community for all who call this home.

Thank you for your action and commitment to the business of creating a Healthy Community for all.

OTHER FOUNDATION GRANTS

Building Resilience Initiative
The Building Resilience Initiative (BRI) is the Seattle philanthropic community’s response to the economic downturn. Drawing on our long-term community knowledge and network of resources, The Seattle Foundation united generous individual donors, local foundations and corporations to create the BRI in Fall 2008. The focus of this Initiative is to help build the capacity of individuals, organizations and communities to prevent King County residents from falling further into crisis and enable them to emerge more resilient and better equipped to achieve future success.

The Seattle Foundation Youth Grantmaking Board
The Youth Grantmaking Board (YGB) helps young people learn how philanthropy can produce positive change in their community by giving them the opportunity to take the lead on all phases of grantmaking. Supported by Foundation staff and community experts, YGB members assess community needs, select a grantmaking focus area, develop requests for proposals, review grant applications, conduct site visits and make final funding recommendations to The Seattle Foundation Board of Trustees.

The Seattle Foundation Medical Funds Grants
Medical grants are awarded each year to support the purchase of equipment. Grants are awarded to organizations that address specific healthcare needs of low-income children in King County and to support medical research in the fields of cancer, cardiopulmonary disease, multiple sclerosis and diabetes.

The Seattle Foundation Scholarship Fund
The Scholarship Fund supports King County residents who demonstrate financial need, outstanding community involvement and academic promise. It is open to all types of students—from high school seniors to current college students, returning students and “non-traditional” students. Recipients may use scholarships at public community colleges, four-year colleges or universities, and trade or vocational schools in the state of Washington.

BANK ON SEATTLE-KING COUNTY

Bank on Seattle-King County is a public and private initiative to connect people without checking and savings accounts to affordable mainstream financial services, including checking, savings, credit and financial education opportunities. This effort provides people with alternatives to paying more than they need to for financial services, in order to help them on a pathway to economic stability and success.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES FOR LEADERSHIP DIVERSITY (BOLD)

Business Opportunities for Leadership Diversity (BOLD) brings together CEOs from some of the region’s most respected companies to share experiences, information and resources in an effort to accelerate employment diversity in each of their companies. In addition to accelerating employment diversity at all levels, particularly where progress is the slowest and most difficult, BOLD is working to influence public opinion of diversity at local companies, shape public policy and promote the employment diversity of the Puget Sound region.
